Copyright and Consent

Copyright

Title of the Article: -----

Journal Name: -----

Copyright in the above article is assigned to the above-selected journal. Before publishing an article, the Authors must obtain written permission from the publisher if significant changes have been made. The content must be authentic, except quotes from copyrighted materials approved by the copyright holder and author. It must not contain slanderous remarks and should not infringe on any patent, copyright, trademark, legal or proprietary rights of any individuals or entities. The Corresponding Author is responsible for signing and accepting responsibility for releasing the material on behalf of all co-authors.

1. The article provides ownership rights, in addition to copyrights, for various things such as employment, consultancies, stock ownership, honoraria, paid expert testimony, patent applications/registrations, and grants or other funding rights. When using tables and figures in future works, it is vital to give proper credit to the publisher as the copyright owner of the article. Making copies of the article for personal use is allowed, but selling them is prohibited.
2. Authors must ensure their work is plagiarism-free when submitting articles to the journal. All submissions undergo a plagiarism check. In case plagiarism is detected in a published article, it is the responsibility of the authors to apologise to the original authors. Plagiarised articles will be rejected automatically, and authors will be embargoed from publishing in the journal for 03 years. Notification will be given to authors in such cases.
3. Authors must disclose any affiliations that could affect their work, such as employment, grants, or stock ownership. They should state any concerns about competing interests when submitting articles. In this case, the authors have no financial or personal ties that could have impacted their research.
4. Authors ensure that submitting articles must be ethically original and not be submitted anywhere in any form for any purpose. Additionally, authors must provide appropriate consent and authority details where data/ material is located. After acceptance of the article for publication, without the copyright holder's permission, it should not be published anywhere in any form of language or version.
5. The corresponding author must verify the order of authors in the article. Any changes to the authorship list, such as adding, deleting, or rearranging, must be made before the article is accepted and with the approval of the journal editor. The corresponding author should provide a valid reason and consent for any changes. When it comes to adding or removing authors, getting confirmation from the author concerned who is either being added or removed is necessary. After accepting the article in exceptional circumstances, the editor will only consider changes to the authorship list. While the article is being reviewed, it will not be published. Any approved changes will be noted in a corrigendum if the article has been published online.
6. A correction notice will be issued to ensure its integrity if an error is found in the article. The Crossmark button will show any updates made to the content, including corrections or retractions. Retraction notices may be issued for unresolved serious issues. Once an article has been published or its copyright has been signed, it cannot be withdrawn under any circumstance.
7. Authors must pay a fixed APC to publish their articles in the journal to retain copyright. The APC cannot be refunded under the following circumstances if (a) if the article has the copyright signed by the author (digital or scanned), (b) if the article is terminated according to the removal policy of the journal, and (c) if the article is withdrawn.
8. The decision to add an article to an indexing and abstracting database, such as Scopus, is solely made by the team, not the journal. Therefore, the journal has no authority over whether an article is accepted or rejected for inclusion in the said database. Furthermore, the journal does not affect the required processing time of an article for inclusion in the indexing and abstracting database.
9. In case of any dispute or violence, it will only be considered and discussed by the Judiciary of Bhopal, located in Madhya Pradesh, India.

Consent

Yes, I have read all the copyright as mentioned above points very carefully. I accept the copyright and sign to publish the above article in the above-selected journal. The Author(s) warrants that their contribution is original, except for such excerpts from copyrighted works as may be included with the permission of the copyright holder and author thereof, that it contains no defamatory statements and does not infringe on any copyright, trademark, patent, statutory right, or propriety right of others.
